

3 PARALLELS OF SUPERVISION: THE EVOLUTION OF THE CLINICAL SUPERVISION RELATIONSHIP

A Workshop with Dr. Jason Branch, LPC, ACS, NCC

A WORKSHOP FOR MENTAL HEALTH PROFESSIONALS

Clinical supervision is not a static process. The supervision experience, process, and relationship evolve as both supervisor and supervisee grow personally and professionally. In this impactful, reflective, and transformational workshop, Dr. Jason Branch draws on more than two decades of clinical experience, knowledge, and insight from the front lines of mental health supervision. Centering the workshop on the framework of Three Parallels: Who You Were, Who You Are, and Who You Are Becoming, Dr. Branch reframes the clinical supervision relationship as a dynamic and transformative journey for supervisors and supervisees alike. Through storytelling, lived experience, clinical training, humor and practical application, participants will explore the emotional and professional shifts that occur as supervisees move through various roles and titles in the supervisory relationship. Dr. Branch weaves themes of authenticity, effective communication, self-disclosure, emotional intelligence, ethics, and cultural humility throughout the workshop. A supervisee may start as a student and evolve into a supervisee, colleague, mentee, mentor, business partner, or even a friend. Dr. Branch's work with individuals who have transitioned from students to licensed collaborators offers a unique perspective that deepens learners' understanding of supervisory identity, ethical decision-making, cultural humility, and personal and professional growth. This workshop invites participants to reimagine supervision as an intentional, collaborative, and identity-shaping practice that grows in depth and complexity over time.
